REPORT OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS
OF
THE SOCIETY OF THE LYING-IN HOSPITAL
1934

The Board of Governors of The Society of the Lying-In Hospital submits herewith its report for the 136th fiscal year of the Society ending December 31, 1934.

On February 14th, 1934 the Society suffered a great loss in the death of Edward W. Sheldon, its President, from 1928. Through his inspiration and leadership the present Lying-In Hospital became possible. As a result of his efforts the work of the Society has greatly increased.

To meet the increasing demand it became necessary to enlarge the capacity of the hospital by 26 private and 20 semi-private beds.

Again this past year the death rate has been low.

On July 1st Dr. Oscar M. Schloss, the Pediatrician-in-Chief, gave up his full time work at the Hospital and became a Consultant. He has cheerfully and kindly lent his aid and assistance since then for which we are grateful.

Through the earnest efforts of the Ladies' Auxiliary, radium treatment has become possible and has been much used. The Board wishes to express to the Ladies' Auxiliary its gratitude for their continued efforts in this direction.

The work of the Social Service has been carried on with great effectiveness.

It is a privilege to convey to the Staff, both professional and administrative, the gratitude of the Board of Governors of The Society of the Lying-In Hospital and of the Board of Governors of The Society of the New York Hospital for their efforts toward making the Hospital of greater benefit to the community.

WILSON M. POWELL,
President.

Medical Report

I have the honor to present the report of the Society of the Lying-In Hospital for the year 1934.

During that year we treated 4317 obstetrical patients on the indoor and outdoor delivery services, and 711 gynecological patients, a total of 5,028 patients, as compared with 5,013 in 1933. Our pavilion beds have been occupied to the extent of 91 per cent, and the private beds 73 per cent of full capacity. The total occupancy, including pavilion, private and semi-private, was 89.9 per cent of the total bed capacity, which means full occupancy because of the nature of our specialty. If proper precautions are to be effectual at all times, we should endeavor to keep our occupancy at a figure not exceeding 85 per cent of available beds.

During 1934 we delivered 3616 women resulting in 3651 babies. The uncorrected maternal mortality, including abortions, ectopic gestations and transfers to other departments, was 6 deaths in 4317 obstetrical patients, or 1.38 per 1,000 patients. This maternal mortality death rate, when expressed in terms of live births is, 1.7 per 1,000 live births as compared with 1.9 per 1,000 live births for the year 1933. Our gross infantile mortality, for indoor and outdoor delivery service, including all babies over 1,500 grams in weight, as well as neonatal deaths during the first two weeks following birth, was 3.806 per cent for the year 1934. In the gynecological service there were 7 deaths in 711 patients, an uncorrected mortality of 0.984 per cent. The operative mortality was 3, or 0.508 per cent in a total of 590 operations.

It is the splendid cooperation on the part of every one working in the Lying-In Hospital which has made it possible to maintain the high standard of work as evidenced by the above statistics. The Attending staff have at all times been available and ready to assist in the supervision and treatment of our patients. The Nursing service in this hospital has been of an unusually high order and we feel that the hospital patients, as well as those who have been delivered in their homes, have received excellent nursing care and attention. Such nursing service has been possible through the efforts of the Nursing Department of the New York Hospital, the Maternity Center Association and the Henry Street Settlement Nursing Service.

The staff of the Berwind Free Maternity Clinic with the support of Mrs. John E. Berwind and under the direction of Miss Mary C. Skelley, has given us unusual cooperation in a large home delivery service conducted on the upper East side of Manhattan.

We wish to express our appreciation of the excellent work of our Anaesthetists, Social Service workers, Clinic Aids and Admitting Officers.

The Department of Nutrition of New York Hospital has served our patients with complete satisfaction. It has also been most valuable in the solution of many dietary problems associated with the proper care of maternity patients.

The other clinical and laboratory departments have continued in their cooperation with this clinic. We are indebted to the Department of Pediatrics for the care given to the babies born in the Lying-In Hospital. This work, initiated by Dr. Oscar M. Schloss, has been carried on under the direction of Dr. Samuel Z. Levine, acting Pediatrician-in-Chief to the New York Hospital. The Department of Medicine has continued its assistance in our special Cardiac Clinic for maternity patients. Dr. Eugene F. DuBois, Physician-in-Chief to the New York Hospital, and his assistants have been invaluable in their consultations and advice in our patients with medical complications. The Departments of Psychiatry and Surgery have helped this department in many phases of its work.

The teaching schedule in the Lying-In Hospital has increased during the past year. The educational activities may be divided under six headings: undergraduate instruction in all phases of obstetrics and gynecology to Cornell Medical students; instruction in this branch of Medicine to New York Hospital nurses; practical instruction to a resident staff of 20 graduates in medicine; an observation course of one month to post graduate students; summer teaching in obstetrics to 32 undergraduate medical students from other universities and lastly instruction through staff conferences and Journal Club meetings to the whole attending and resident staffs, as well as many visitors.

Our weekly Monday afternoon staff conferences which are open to physicians interested in hearing frank discussions of gynecological and obstetrical problems, are attended each week by fifty to sixty doctors some of whom are visitors from various parts of the country. This conference lasts from two to four hours and at present the departmental library, which is the largest room in the Lying-In Hospital, is filled to capacity at the time of these conferences. We believe that this type of teaching is the best form of post graduate instruction.

We are firmly convinced that maternal mortality in the United States will be lowered only by two factors, better undergraduate teaching of the subject of obstetrics and gynecology in our medical schools and more intensive and more rigorously supervised training of young doctors in our maternity hospitals. We have tried to meet these two specifications by having obstetrics and gynecology assume as important a role as surgery or medicine in the curriculum of the Cornell University Medical College and by instituting a five year hospital residency system for the training of medical graduates who wish to specialize in the field of obstetrics and gynecology.

The Lying-In Hospital is always open to visiting doctors who wish to observe our work for a day, a week, or even months. We constantly have such visitors, and a few have spent long periods of time with us.

The Ladies' Auxiliary Board of the Lying-In Hospital supported and directed the activities of our Social Service Department, which has worked in an exceedingly satisfactory manner, cooperating, to the interest of every patient, with the medical, nursing and clerical staffs. The Ladies' Board has helped the Lying-In Hospital in other ways, particularly in providing funds for the rental of radium, and for the support of a special maternal health clinic. As a result we have, for the first time, been able to treat in a satisfactory manner many women suffering from cancer. We wish to express our deep gratitude to the Ladies' Auxiliary Board of the Lying-In Hospital.

The members of the Executive Committee of the Board of the Society of the Lying-In Hospital have assisted us in so many instances that it is impossible to note them in these pages. I have constantly called upon them and on the members of the Board of Governors of the New York Hospital for advice and assistance, and have always received their sympathetic understanding and support. The staff of the Lying-In Hospital wishes to express here its deep sense of gratitude to these two governing Boards.

H. J. STANDER, M. D.,
Obstetrician and Gynecologist-in-Chief.

Report of Nursing Activities

I herewith submit the annual report of the Nursing Service of the Lying-In Hospital for the year nineteen hundred and thirty-four.

Our aim to maintain a high standard of maternity nursing care as set up with the aid of the medical staff, has been greatly advanced by closer contact and cooperation with the Maternity Center Association and other organizations caring for our patients in their homes. This association has provided opportunity for the review of information given to patients registered at our antenatal clinic. A pamphlet containing advice to mothers and one of standing orders for public health nurses have been prepared by a committee of our medical and nursing staffs. Through the interest of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board this material has been printed and is now being distributed to our patients.

The increased census due to the opening of semi-private beds has required a corresponding increase in staff membership, bringing the total appointments for the year to one hundred and twenty-seven. This figure includes twenty-nine former students whose familiarity with the methods of the department reduced the interruption to service usually attending change.

During nineteen hundred and thirty-four, thirty-eight students of the New York Hospital School of Nursing received instruction and had practice in obstetrical and gynecological nursing. Fifty-nine affiliating students have had the same experience; eighteen from the Bloomingdale Hospital School of Nursing at White Plains, New York; thirty from the Lenox Hill Hospital School of Nursing in New York City; eleven from the Moses Taylor Hospital School of Nursing at Scranton, Pa. Thirty-eight graduate students were admitted to the school, representing schools of nursing in eighteen states. One hundred and twenty-seven of the total number of students enrolled satisfactorily completed the course.

Little change has been made in the course of instruction for the students, effort being directed toward the improvement of its application to the better care of patients. An additional four months of advanced study has been planned for graduate students of exceptional ability who, having completed the basic course, wish to register for ward management and ward teaching with related practice assisting the head nurses on the pavilions. Applications are now being considered for the first class.

Evidence of continued interest in professional growth is shown by voluntary attendance of the staff at lectures and clinics within the hospital, and by registration at the various schools and colleges in the city. This broadening influence has been increased by the stimulation of contact with many professional visitors from home and abroad who have spent from a few hours to two weeks in this clinic.

At Christmas time, the patients who were unable to be at home on this day when families like to be together, were made happy through the generosity of Mrs. John D. Peabody and Mr. William A. W. Stewart, and through the efforts of staff members, student nurses, and friends. Each mother and baby received an attractive and useful gift.

The Nursing Service of the Lying-In Hospital is indebted to many individuals and groups for their generous cooperation during the past year; to the medical staff for their constant help and advice and for their special contribution in the form of lectures to student nurses; to the Ladies' Auxiliary Board for their interest and timely assistance; and to the many other departments of the hospital that have cooperated with us in our common interest for the patients. I also wish to express my appreciation of the loyal support of the members of the nursing staff.

Respectfully submitted,

VERDA F. HICKCOX, R.N.

Head of the Obstetrical and Gynecological
Nursing Service and Instruction.

REPORT OF THE LADIES' AUXILIARY TO THE SOCIETY OF THE LYING-IN HOSPITAL

NOVEMBER 1, 1933--OCTOBER 31, 1934

During our second year in this new building the work of the Ladies' Auxiliary has been as follows:

The House Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. Farrar Bateson, has received articles of clothing from Mrs. A. K. Schopf, Miss Marion Wharton, the American Red Cross, the Junior League Clothing Center and the laundry of the New York Hospital. The mothers' sewing class was started and has met once a week. We provided 245 yards of material for the class. Out of each two garments made, one was kept by the mother and one was given to the hospital. Now the women buy their material from us at cost and we use this money to purchase new material. We feel that the class has been of benefit to the mothers and they have shown great interest in learning to make their babies' clothes. Eighty-five books were donated to the Social Service Library of the New York Hospital. We wish to thank the Library Committee for distributing 4108 books in the Lying-In Hospital during the year.

Mrs. Allan Locke has continued her splendid work as chairman of the Volunteer Workers Committee. Forty-four women have done volunteer work in the Lying-In Hospital this year. For the winter months there was an average of 14 workers, giving 75 hours of work a week.

Mrs. Harris Harder is chairman of the Babies' Alumnae of the Lying-In Hospital, which was organized in May. $375 have been contributed to the fund, and the money is to be used for medical social service relief.

The Executive Committee has met regularly once a week except during the summer months, to attend to such matters as needed attention between board meetings.

Mrs. Morgan Hamilton, Mrs. E. Farrar Bateson and Irving B. Kingsford have gone through all our old records and have put them in good order. Our Scrap Book dating from 1897 gives a picture of the work done by the Ladies' Auxiliary since that time.

Last March a visiting committee was formed of two members to visit the hospital once a week for a month, to be replaced the following month by two other members, so that each member of the Board should have an opportunity to become familiar with the workings of the hospital. This was done at Dr. Stander's request.

The radium has been in constant use and we hope will pay enough to cover its rental, and eventually accumulate a surplus with which it can be bought.

The treasurer's report shows disbursements of $8,531.33 and a balance on October 31, 1934, of $2,949.22. This balance includes $325 belonging to the Babies' Alumnae Fund.

To Miss Riley is due the success and high standard of the work in the Social Service Department. She has been ably assisted by Mrs. McLane and Miss Street. The latter came to us in February to replace Miss Tynes who resigned to do Federal Relief work.

Respectfully submitted

VIRGINIA M. HIGGINSON,

President.

THE BIRTHDAY FUND

Established 1922

This Fund, which is maintained entirely by voluntary contributions, provides free hospital care for the most needy cases coming under our supervision, and 42 of the aforementioned subscribers in the period covered by this report have made donations thereto aggregating $509.00.

The Governors take this opportunity to express their grateful acknowledgments to those who contributed to this, and to the General Fund of the Hospital.

MISCELLANEOUS DONATIONS

MORBIDITY (FULL TERM AND PREMATURE DELIVERIES):

By "Puerperal Infection" is meant a rise in temperature to 100.4°F. (38°C.) occurring once during each of two twenty-four hour periods following delivery or remaining elevated longer than 24 hours, excluding the first 24 hours after delivery, unless the rise in temperature is definitely proven to be due to other causes, such as mastitis, pyelitis, or intercurrent infection. Morbidity includes all cases of Puerperal Infection and all those febrile from other causes. A temperature elevated to 100.4°F. (38°C.) once, or of only 24 hours duration, is a One Day Fever, and not included in the morbidity figure. The temperatures are taken on the Indoor Service as follows: 6-10 a.m., 2-6-10 p.m., unless otherwise ordered. The temperature on the Outdoor Services are taken by the visiting nurse once a day at the time of her routine visit, unless otherwise ordered.

HISTORY No. 52021—Peritonitis and Pyelitis

Patient, age 34, colored, para 5-0-3-1, Wassermann negative, was transferred from Berwind Service after onset of labor because of hydramnios and temperature of 38.2° C. On admission cervix was 2 cm. dilated, foetal heart heard, pains strong. Membranes were ruptured artificially and 2500 cc. of greenish-tinged amniotic fluid were obtained. Foetal heart was lost 24 hours before delivery. R.O.P. mid-forceps delivery; Scanzoni manœuvre; DeWees forceps used unsuccessfully so Tucker-McLane forceps were used. Deadborn macerated infant weighing 4220 grams was delivered. The first two postpartum days were normal. On the third day patient had slight hemoptysis, chill, and temperature rose to 39.2° C., the pulse being 146. There was abdominal distention, and tenderness over the entire right abdomen. A diagnosis of pyelitis was made. On the fourth day the right kidney was catheterized. On the fifth day the impression was pelvic peritonitis. Blood chemistry showed non protein nitrogen 73.2 mg. Insulin was administered. There seemed to be some improvement in her condition until the twelfth day, when severe generalized abdominal pain occurred. Her condition grew steadily worse and the patient died on the fifteenth postpartum day.

Autopsy: Generalized fibrino-purulent peritonitis, bilateral pyelitis.

HISTORY No. 55678—Post Partum Hemorrhage Following Caesarean Section

Mother, age 40, colored, para 2-0-1-1, Wassermann negative, pelvis normal. First delivery in 1920 mid-forceps; second pregnancy in 1921 terminated by caesarean section, indication unknown. Spontaneous abortion in 1927. Patient had had diabetes for past 3 years; treated for 18 months, by diet only. Blood sugar 153 mg. Patient admitted at onset of labor, and because of a large baby and patient's past history and blood sugar of 96 mg. before meal and 140 mg. after meal, it was decided to perform a Caesarean section. Classical Caesarean section done under ether-gas anesthesia. Infant weighed 4850 gm.; was in good condition; discharged well. During the operation there was moderate bleeding, 500 cc. of blood estimated, and patient seemed in good condition, but the blood pressure was 80/50. Following operation, patient was given 500 cc. of 10% glucose intravenously with 25 units of insulin. Blood pressure remained 80/40. Patient lost 300 cc. more blood, uterus became soft, and patient went into shock. A short time later 300 cc. of blood were expressed. She was given 500 cc. of saline intravenously, pituitrin, gynergin, and tamponade of the uterus was done. Patient reacted well, was given 300 cc. of gum acacia; blood pressure 60/20. Suddenly 4-42/60 hours after operation the blood pressure fell to zero, and patient died without responding to any stimulation. Impression: Death due to postpartum hemorrhage. Blood loss estimated at between 1800 and 2000 cc.

Autopsy: Thrombosis of ovarian veins
Edema of uterus
Congestion and edema of lungs Calcified nodules, subpleural, of right lung and tracheobronchial lymph nodes
Fibrous pleural adhesions

HISTORY No. 41516—Premature separation of the placenta.

Patient, age 32, colored, para 5-1-2-3, Wassermann negative, pelvis normal. Was first seen in the Berwind Clinic in 1933, and referred to the New York Hospital because of a toxemia. Patient had a spontaneous abortion. Toxemia diagnosed as chronic nephritis. Patient registered again in March 1934, expected date of delivery July 27, 1934. Study of toxemia was made in hospital. Diagnosis was toxemia unclassified. On June 24, 1934, patient was again admitted because of onset of mild labor pains. On the morning of the following day pains became severe; foetal heart could not be heard; vaginal bleeding occurred. Bleeding was fresh blood, not clots. Uterus did not seem to relax. Hemoglobin, which was 82% on admission, fell to 52%. Possibility of premature separation of the placenta was considered. That afternoon a sterile vaginal examination was done to rule out placenta praevia; no evidence found. Membranes were ruptured artificially. A Voorhees bag was inserted. A varicosity of the labia was ruptured at this time, and about 500 cc. of blood lost before bleeding was controlled by a suture. The patient's condition was poor. She was given a transfusion of 500 cc. The blood pressure rose to 60/40. Another transfusion was given a little later. The vagina was packed. Blood pressure never rose, and condition became steadily worse. Death occurred at 11 p. m. of the same day.

Diagnosis: Premature separation of the placenta.

Autopsy: Premature separation of the placenta.
Pulmonary congestion, right lower lobe.
Small subendocardial hemorrhages.

HISTORY No. 62622—Postpartum hemorrhage, internal.

Mother, age 31, white, para 1-0-0-1, generally contracted typical pelvis and Wassermann negative, L.M.P. December 28, 1933. Patient referred to New York Hospital Dystocia Clinic from Berwind Clinic on April 19, 1934 because of pelvic mass and history of slight spotting. Diagnosis of pregnant uterus with myoma on left side was made. Patient went into labor spontaneously, admitted with membranes intact September 29, 1934. Fetal head was in left upper quadrant and breech in right iliac fossa. Membranes ruptured spontaneously and hand prolapsed into vagina. Braxton-Hicks version was attempted but failed. Fetal heart lost 1 hour after attempted version. Because of compound presentation, temperature of 37.8°C., and lack of uterine relaxation, Porro Caesarean section was done. Transverse incision was found to be through a myoma about 10 cm. in diameter. Myomata were enucleated. Infant was deadborn, weighing 3730 gm. and measuring 54 cm. in total length. Because of wide enucleation of myoma supravaginal hysterectomy was done. Blood loss about 500 cc.; sutures were placed with difficulty in uterine vessels because of edematous cervix. Transfusion of 550 cc. citrated blood given during and after the operation. Following operation condition was good, pulse around 100 and blood pressure 130/80. Patient passed about 100 cc. of blood per vagina about 2 hours later, pulse the same as previously and respiration 24. An hour later the pulse became weak, 120, and patient was put in shock position. There was no evidence of internal bleeding, blood pressure 70-80/50. Respirations suddenly became rapid, pulse thready and blood pressure inaudible. She was given gum acacia, sodium caffeine benzoate, adrenalin and oxygen while transfusion was being obtained. An hour and a half later the patient became unconscious and respirations ceased.

No autopsy. Death probably due to internal hemorrhage, probably from loose suture. In the vagina after death there were 500 cc. of old clotted blood.

HISTORY No. 76883—Pulmonary Embolism

Patient, age 34, white, para 5-0-0-3, Wassermann negative, pelvis normal, was delivered spontaneously after a labor of 13-35/60 hours of a living male infant by the Berwind Clinic. On the fifth postpartum day patient complained of pain in the left flank and left shoulder, frequency and nocturia. A provisional diagnosis of pyelitis was made. On the 11th day postpartum the temperature was 100.4° F., respiration 40, pulse 120; patient was breathing rapidly, there was slight cyanosis, lungs were negative. Because of the increasing respiratory embarrassment, and increased pulse rate, the patient was transferred to the New York Hospital on the 14th postpartum day with a diagnosis of questionable pulmonary embolism. After admission a diagnosis of pulmonary infarct seemed most likely from the findings at the left base of the lung of parenchymal and pleural nature. Blood culture was negative, temperature varied between normal and 38.8°C. Patient was placed in the oxygen tent. On the fourth day after admission patient was transferred to the Medical Service. The examination of the lungs showed a few rales at the bases. Patient died 1-15/60 hours after transfer. The impression was Pulmonary Embolism with repeated small pulmonary infarcts secondary to pathology in the leg veins or pelvis.

Autopsy: Not Obtained.

HISTORY No. 55269—Multiple pulmonary infarcts secondary to probable thrombophlebitis of right leg.

Patient, age 42, white, para 2-0-0-1, Kline Test negative in 17th week of pregnancy; Kline and Wassermann Tests in the 30th week were 4-plus (patient had received antiluetic treatments 14 years previously), pelvis normal, was admitted because of antepartum bleeding November 1, 1934, expected date of delivery January 27, 1935. Diagnosis of central placenta praevia was made, a No. 3 Voorhees Bag inserted 4 days later, and medical induction given. Patient did not go into labor; bag was removed (24 hours later), no bleeding. Three days later the temperature rose to 38.6°C. bleeding recurred – 500 cc., Braxton Hicks version was done, transfusion given, bleeding was controlled, patient went into labor, was delivered by breech extraction, manual removal of placenta. Infant was deadborn, macerated, weighed 1510 gm., length 43 cm. Placenta showed placentitis, no evidence of lues. Puerperium was afebrile, temperature never rose above 37.2° C., patient was discharged well on the 12th day postpartum. On the day of discharge from the Hospital, after the patient was at home, she developed pain in the outer aspect of the right leg; ankle was swollen for 4 days, pain gradually subsided. One week after discharge from the Hospital, the patient was seen in her home by the doctor on the Outdoor Service because she complained of pain in the left lower chest of 3 days' duration, shortness of breath and malaise. There were many rales in the left lower chest. Diagnosis of possible pneumonia was made and patient was admitted to the Medical Service. Examination showed dullness at left base of lung and many rales. Temperature 37.6° C., pulse 100, respiration 26. Impression was infarction of lung secondary to embolism from right leg. Condition improved somewhat. On the seventh day after admission, patient suddenly became nauseated, dyspnoeic, cyanotic, many rales were present, pulse imperceptible and patient died. Final diagnosis: Multiple pulmonary infarcts secondary to probable thrombophlebitis of right leg.

                  Infarcts of lungs, bilateral.
                  Pulmonary emboli, occluding main branches of both pulmonary arteries.
                  Acute splenic tumor.

INFANTILE MORTALITY

Total infantile mortality includes all full term and premature infants, deadborn, stillborn or dying within 14 days following birth on the Lying-In Hospital Indoor and Outdoor Obstetrical Services and Berwind Outdoor Obstetrical Service. Abortions are all infants born weighing less than 1,500 grams, or measuring less than 35 cm. in length. Abortions are not included in the Total Infantile Mortality.

HISTORY No. 44034—Adenocarcinoma of the fundus.

Patient, age 47, white, para 1-0-0-1, Wassermann negative, past history negative. Onset of illness September, 1932, when menses became irregular. Patient bled daily; had X-ray therapy. Vaginal bleeding ceased except for occasional spotting. Weight loss was from 160 to 115 lbs. in 7 months. On admission to Hospital in October, 1933, malignancy was diagnosed by vaginal smear and diagnostic dilatation and curettage. Pathological diagnosis was adenocarcinoma of fundus, Group III. Patient had an intermittent fever. Hemoglobin 54%. Given 5 transfusions during stay in Hospital. A perirectal abscess developed. X-rays of lungs and bones were negative for metastases. In spite of all treatment, patient's condition never improved, and death occurred on the 116th day after admission.

Autopsy: Adenocarcinoma of the uterus with invasion of the wall of the ileum and bladder; metastases to iliac and aortic lymph nodes and liver; thrombosis of left iliac, femoral and saphenous veins; duodenal ulcer.

HISTORY No. 2265—Adenocarcinoma of the ovary

Patient, white, para I, menopause 2 years ago, age 43, Wassermann negative, was first admitted to the Gynecological Service on September 12, 1932 complaining of anorexia, loss of 12 pounds of weight in 2 months, inconstant pain in lower abdomen and increasing enlargement of abdomen. From pelvic examination a diagnosis of malignancy of the ovary was made. An exploratory laparotomy was done on October 3, 1932 and biopsy of ovarian tumor taken. Pathological diagnosis was papillary adenocarcinoma of the ovary. Later patient was given a series of deep X-ray therapy until March 8, 1933 at which time the ovarian tumor was removed. Later more X-ray therapy was given. Patient had repeated hospital admissions for abdominal paracentesis, a total of 135,000 cc. of fluid being removed. On December 4, 1933 beginning gangrene of the left fingers was noted; on December 26, 1933 patient had a cerebral accident which paralyzed the right side of her face and right arm. X-rays of lungs were negative for metastases. Patient continued to lose weight and have marked ascites and was admitted for a paracentesis on March 20, 1934. Suddenly on March 27, 1934 patient began to have generalized convulsions occurring every 3 minutes and lasting about 1 minute. Her condition grew steadily worse and respirations ceased at 4:47 a.m. on March 28, 1934.

Autopsy: Papillary cystadenocarcinoma of left ovary; implantations on peritoneum; metastases to iliac, inguinal and mesenteric lymph nodes.

HISTORY No. 38898—Carcinoma of cervix.

Patient, age 42, white, para 3-0-0-3, Wassermann unknown, was admitted first on September 8, 1933 because of extreme pain in left lumbar region. A diagnosis of carcinoma of the cervix, hydronephrosis and hydroureter was made. One year before an ulcerated cervix had been noted and a trachelorrhaphy done followed by radium and x-ray therapy. Patient was given deep x-ray therapy. In December, 1933, patient was readmitted and a hypogastric sympathectomy done for the relief of pain. On March 3, 1934, she was readmitted, condition much worse. Relief from pain had been only of three weeks' duration. Patient grew steadily worse and death occurred on April 7, 1934.

Autopsy: Not obtained.

HISTORY No. 64079—Pelvic malignancy.

Patient, age 55, white, single, was admitted complaining of weakness, loss of weight, and a tumor of the abdomen. At the age of 40 she had been told that she had a tumor of the uterus. Menopause at the age of 50; some vaginal bleeding 2 years ago, and slight bleeding for the past 8 months. On admission the temperature was 38.6°C. and patient stated she had had chills and fever, with tenderness over the right kidney, for 2 weeks. Five days after admission an examination under anesthesia was done, and a large tumor found in the cul-de-sac. It was impossible to curette the uterine cavity because of the mass pushing the cervix up against the symphysis. The hemoglobin was 68%, so a transfusion of 500 cc. of citrated blood was given. Following this the patient's temperature rose to 40°C., she became disoriented, and had profuse sweating. Patient was comatose at times. Two days later a blood chemistry showed non-protein nitrogen of 73 mg.; uric acid, 5.9 mg.; sugar, 150 mg. Cystoscopic examination was attempted, but was impossible because of the distortion of the bladder due to the tumor mass. Patient's condition grew steadily worse. The temperature rose to 41.8°C., non-protein nitrogen to 166 mg., uric acid to 10.6 mg., and the patient died 18 days after admission.

Autopsy: Not obtained.

HISTORY No. 63744—Generalized peritonitis

Patient, age 29, white, single, was admitted on May 10, 1934, for repair of a vesico-vaginal fistula. A total hysterectomy, bilateral salpingectomy, and right oophorectomy had been performed in 1931 at another hospital for fibromyomata and tuberculous salpingitis, at which time the left ureter was accidentally severed and later transplanted into the bladder. An attempt was made in 1932 to repair the vesico-vaginal fistula. A cystoscopic examination was made after admission. Diagnosis was nephrolithiasis, hydronephrosis, fistula between bladder and vagina. Because of inaccessibility by the vaginal route, repair of the urethro-vesico-vaginal fistula was done abdominally 18 days after admission. The day after operation patient's temperature rose to 39.6°C. On the third day symptoms of generalized peritonitis developed. Blood cultures were negative; patient was given 4 small transfusions; wound healed well; patient continued to drain urine vaginally; temperature remained elevated. Patient's condition grew steadily worse and death occurred 12 days post-operative.

Autopsy: Not obtained.

HISTORY No. 77666—Carcinoma of the Ovaries.

Patient, age 57, white, para 1-0-0-1, Wassermann negative, menopause 27 years ago, was admitted to the Medical Service and was transferred to the Gynecology Service two days later after a tentative diagnosis of ovarian cyst had been made. Her history was loss of weight during the previous 9 months, swelling of feet and legs for 2 months, increase in size of abdomen for 3 months and nausea and vomiting. On examination there was evidence of ascites. Gastro-intestinal series could not be performed because of the patient's nausea and vomiting. Six days after admission an exploratory laparotomy was performed, 6000 cc. of fluid were removed and a generalized carcinomatous condition of the abdominal cavity found; the primary lesion was believed to be in the region of the pylorus. The pathology report of the ascitic fluid was adenocarcinoma, colloid, questionable. The patient's condition grew steadily worse, the ascites became as marked as before operation, and the patient died on the 16th day post-operative.

Autopsy: Carcinoma of both ovaries; generalized miliary carcinomatosis of peritoneal cavity; cyst filled with bloody fluid in wall of stomach; bronchopneumonia with abscess of lower lobe of left lung; chronic endocarditis of mitral valve.

HISTORY No. 61578—Carcinoma of ovaries with metastases.

Patient, age 53, white, para 2-0-0-1, Kline tests negative, was first admitted to the Medical Service in April, 1934, complaining of epigastric pain and distress of many years' duration and recent increase in size of abdomen. Examination of ascitic fluid showed carcinomatous cells and a diagnosis of carcinoma of the ovary was made. A diagnostic curettage showed metastases of ovarian carcinoma to the uterus. Patient was given x-ray therapy. While patient was out of the city a private doctor performed a laparotomy and removed a large tumor from the left side of the pelvis. Pathological diagnosis was serous cystadenocarcinoma of the ovaries. The patient was admitted eight times to the Gynecological Service for paracentesis and had 4 cycles of x-ray therapy. Her condition grew steadily worse. The last admission was December 28, 1934 at which time the patient was dyspnoeic and cyanotic. Abdominal and thoracic paracentesis were performed. Patient became semi-comatose and died the day after admission.

Autopsy: Primary carcinoma of the right ovary with metastases to peritoneum, omentum, mesentery, mesenteric lymph nodes, liver, diaphragm, pleura and pericardium.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SOCIAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT

The report of the Social Service Department for the year 1934 includes the initiation of new projects by the Department. Through the Ladies' Auxiliary we were able to organize the Babies' Alumni of the Lying-In Hospital. This has provided a lucrative source of income which is needed to give to our patients relief necessary to carry out a medical social plan. The response that we have had from the patients has been exceptional and is apparently promoting the loyalty to the new hospital which is so evident in those who have previously been delivered in the old Lying-In Hospital. With the assistance of the Maternity Center Association, we have sponsored a sewing class. The class has met and grown during the year and is enabling our patients to make their layettes according to our own standards.

Following our plan of last year, we have carried out with the assistance of the clinic physicians the follow-up of all patients registered in the antenatal and post partum clinics, the special clinics and gynecology. Our most interesting figure this year as last is the post partum return which has risen from a rate of 88% to one of 90%. This large percentage of returns must indicate in some way the confidence of the patient in the hospital and demonstrates specifically that good maternity care is appreciated. During the year the average number of cases open in the ante partum clinic was 981 per month and out of this group not one patient was lost through failure to respond to follow-up. As part of our follow-up work this year, through a special worker we demonstrated in a specific piece of work in the gynecology clinic the success that follows the social approach to patients whose individual problems are lost in the routine of a large clinic.

Our contacts with the outside agencies which are necessary to carry on the social casework of the department have increased and need for working cooperation with the various social agencies of the city has shown itself in the necessary supervision of the medical social plans in those cases where there is a medical problem. The social problem of a maternity patient is so closely allied with the entire family situation that in our casework it is important for us to deal with the family group rather than the individual alone.

The department has participated in professional activities of the American Association of Medical Social Workers and also in the activities of the Welfare Council of New York City. Our interests are developing and extending with our contacts in the other fields of the hospital with which we are constantly associated.

We are appreciative of the generosity and interest of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board whose advice and assistance are available to the department at all times.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY ALICE RILEY, Director.
